Chapter 1 by Sabrina

It all started when god created a human and put It on earth. God gave him the ability to think, create and reproduce. It was as simple as that, but sadly, the human wanted more. He became more and more greedy. He wanted power, money and everyone to envy him. Soon, the human started to destroy what he created and the people who once cared about him, hate him from the depth of their hearts. And that's how hatred was created into the world. The human started to call the other their slaves, he underrated them and made them do things for him. The hatred grew and grew, until he finally had enough and tried to kill him. On his death bed, he felt betrayed, angry and most of all, lonely. With his last breath and a teary eye, he realized what kind of monster he became. Wonder why I told this before the story actually starts? You will need It later, trust me.
